I am a PhD student in the Linguistics Department at the University of California, Berkeley.

My research centers on (metrical) phonology, morphology, syntax, and the interfaces of the three. My other interests include semantics, language documentation, language revitalization, and psycholinguistics.

The primary empirical focus of my work is A'ingae (or Cofán, iso 639-3: con), an Amazonian language isolate spoken by ca. 1,500 Cofán people in northeast Ecuador and southern Colombia.

Below, my research projects are listed in vague order of recent, active interest. See curriculum vitae for publications by type and in chronological order.

1 A'INGAE (OR COFÁN)

1.1 Metrical phonology and its interfaces

I describe and analyze the phonology of stress and glottalization in A'ingae (or Cofán, isolate, ISO 639-3: con) and provide a detailed description of the language's rich verbal morphology. I argue that the A'ingae morpheme-specific dominance effects (stress deletion) cannot be captured representationally. I demonstrate that the licensing of the A'ingae glottal stop differs across two morphophonological domains (metrically licensed within the inner, but not the outer, domain) and interacts with stress deletion in a way which bears out a new prediction of Cophonologies by Phase (Sande, Jenks, and Inkelas, 2020).

1.2 Diphthongs and their changes

I document a typologically unusual process of postlabial raising in A'ingae. I present a model which derives the postlabial raising through an interaction of constraint weights and the number of Q-Theoretic (Inkelas and Shih, 2016, 2017) subsegments, providing a novel argument for the representations of Q-Theory.

1.3 Rationale and apprehensional semantics in a typological perspective

In a collaborative project with Scott AnderBois, we describe and analyze different uses of the A'ingae apprehensional morpheme -sa'ne APPR. We put forth a formal account of rationale and precautioning clauses, which captures language-internal asymmetries and typological trends within this semantic domain.

1.4 Language documentation

I documented A'ingae in the indigenous communities of Dureno and Sinangoé, Sucumbíos, Ecuador. I deposited over 14h of traditional and contemporary oral narratives (2h30 transcribed and translated). I managed the development of LingView, a web interface for viewing multimedia language materials.

1.5 The left periphery

I argue that A'ingae second-position clitics are matrix clausal C-heads. I demonstrate that A'ingae has roll-up pied-piping. To account for the A'ingae data, I develop a novel model of pied-piping which derives wh-feature percolation with Béjar and Rezac's (2009) mechanism of Cyclic Agree.

2 DISCONTINUOUS VOWEL HARMONY IN GUÉBIE

In a collaborative project with Hannah Sande and Emily Clem, we document and analyze discontinuous vowel harmony in Guébie (Kru, iso 639-3: gie) focus fronting. We propose a novel model of the phonology-syntax interface, where subparts of phonologically evaluated phases may undergo further movement.

3 LOGIC IN SPONTANEOUS LANGUAGE COMPREHENSION

In a collaborative project with Roman Feiman, I designed and implemented a novel experimental paradigm for detecting processing difficulty signatures in self-paced reading tasks. We demonstrate that spontaneous natural language comprehension is normatively accurate.

4 PARAGUAYAN GUARANÍ AND FREE AFFIX ORDER

I describe and analyze the prosodic structure of the verb in Paraguayan Guaraní (Tupian, ISO 639-3: gug). I show that the Paraguayan Guaraní (partially free) suffix order is determined by phonological subcategorization and prosodic well-formedness. I propose that the phenomenon of free affix order is not unified, but driven by either phonology or morphology, giving rise to two distinct typological profiles.

5 YUCATEC MAYA SYNTAX IN SBCG

In a collaborative project with Justin Bai, Nicholas Tomlin, and Kalinda Pride, we formalize a syntactic fragment of Yucatec Maya (Mayan, iso 639-3: yua) in Sign-Based Construction Grammar. I argue against a nominalization analysis of the language's intransitive subjunctive control.
